DETAILED ACTION

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

1. A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on 9/14/2006 has been entered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

2. Claims 76-91 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the written description requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter, which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that the inventor(s), at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention.

The examiner notes that claims 76-91 state a system/method for allocating a codes to different processes in a television system and printing out the codes so that the user has a list of all of the codes allocated to the different processes.

The independent claims state, "allocation means, for allocating a code determined in advance to a process relating to some of the multiple functions, and allocation an optional code other than the code determined in advance to processes relating to a function other than said some of the multiple functions". Therefore, a code is determined for one process and an optional code is assigned to another process. The claim further states, "output means, for outputting list information for printing, which list information associates the code allocated by said allocation means with the processes corresponding to the codes, wherein when a print instruction is received from a user, said allocation means allocates the optional codes different from each other to the respective processes relating to the functions other than said some of the multiple functions, and said output means outputs the list information to printing means". The examiner recognizes that different types of codes can be allocated to different processes, however the examiner notes that the specification does not teach allocating the optional codes different from each other to the respective processes relating to the functions other than said some of the multiple functions, when a print instruction has been received. In addition the examiner notes that the term "optional" is not found anywhere in the specification of the instant application.

3. Claims 76-91 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the enablement requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter, which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention.

The independent claims state, "allocation means, for allocating a code determined in advance to a process relating to some of the multiple functions, and allocation an optional code other than the code determined in advance to processes relating to a function other than said some of the multiple functions". Therefore, a code is determined for one process and an optional code is assigned to another process. The claim further states, "output means, for outputting list information for printing, which list information associates the code allocated by said allocation means with the processes corresponding to the codes, wherein when a print instruction is received from a user, said allocation means allocates the optional codes different from each other to the respective processes relating to the functions other than said some of the multiple functions, and said output means outputs the list information to printing means".

The examiner notes that only one code and one optional code is being allocated in the claim, therefore the system could not allocate the optional codes to the respective processes, because only one optional code has been previously assigned to a process.
